The recent few weeks have been the perfect time for a good book and here are some good ones that allow readers to get completely lost in another world.

Watch Me Disappear

If you like mysteries with family drama, Janelle Brown's best-selling thriller is for you. The story follows a wealthy wife and mom who goes on a hike and never returns. Her lonely husband and teenage daughter, Olive (who's dealing with her own problems), are confused with sorrow while trying to find out what happens.

The Boy from the Woods

If you pick up one of Harlan Coben's books, you won't be able to put it down. His misty stories keep readers fascinated. The Boy from the Woods, is sure to satisfy fans of his twisty, heart-racing plots filled with interesting and exciting atmosphere. This is the book to read if you love masterful surprises.

How to Walk Away

Katherine Center's best-selling novel follows a young woman, Margaret, with her perfect fiancé, a pilot who takes her on a upsetting flight that changes her life forever. Readers adore Margaret's wisdom and humor as she faces a changed world and figures out what love really looks like.

The Last One Left

This novel, first published in 1967, still attracts readers decades later. Novelist Dean Koontz wrote the introduction to the recent edition, where he describes reading each of John D. MacDonald's novels "at least three times, some of them twice that often." This is your next read if you want to be swept away by a master of mystery and excitement.

21. What is Watch Me Disappear probably about?

- A. A family outing.
- B. Teenager problems.
- C. Sorrow at a dead mom.
- D. Misty missing of a woman.

22. Which book is for romance lovers?

- A. How to Walk Away.
- B. The Boy from the Woods.
- C. Watch Me Disappear.
- D. The Last One Left.

23. Who is the author of The Last One Left?

- A. Dean Koontz.
- B. John D. MacDonald.
- C. Katherine Center.
- D. Harlan Coben.

B

The past few years found me working long hours at my marketing job while my husband, Steven, put in equally full days as a physics tutor. The weekends were spent photographing weddings and portraits. While we were able to save some money, we were both burned out from the constant tiring work.

We felt the need for both renewal and vacation experiences. So, in January, we set out on a seven-month, cross-country road trip to visit all 61 National Parks in the United States.

Steven was ready to dive headlong into the unknown, while I, someone who enjoys more planned fun, had to adapt. I was amazed at how easily I turned to be a more relaxed version who wasn't worried where to park or sleep. We both became so accustomed to sleeping in the van, despite the foreign sound outside, which we eventually let fade into white noise.

Over the course of our seven-month trip, several interruptions changed our route, including the government shutdown, which left the first 10 parks inaccessible. Another time, I fell ill and lost my voice right as we were heading to the Virgin Islands National Park.

Positively, while we've done photography professionally for years, this trip really helped us grow in our craft. From rapidly trying to shoot dolphins to lining up panoramic(全景的) shots, this trip was a photographer's dream. I never dared out into complete darkness to photograph nightscapes, but the views of the Milky Way we managed to shoot were well worth it.

One of our big goals on this trip was to come away from each park with one spectacular image, something that pushed us both to become better artists in the process. That shared goal placed us on the same team: It brought us together, gave us more to talk about, and encouraged us to motivate each other along the way.

24. Why did the couple take such a trip?

- A. They were both out of work.
- B. They needed some photos of parks.
- C. They wanted a getaway from exhausting work.
- D. They wanted to make money by photographing.

25. What surprised the author on the trip?

- A. The trip was full of unexpected difficulties.
- B. The trip was nothing like her planned fun.
- C. She enjoyed his husband's way of travel.
- D. She had several fights with her husband.

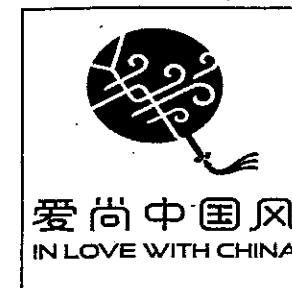

26. What failed them to visit the first 10 parks?

- A. Bad sleep in the van.
- B. The author's illness.
- C. The change of route.
- D. The government shutdown.

27. What have the couple gained from the trip?

- A. They've caught some dolphins.
- B. They've become famous artists.
- C. They've bettered their relationship.
- D. They've got their professional photographer certificates.

C

The slogan for the Cultural Heritage and Sustainable Development Fund is "In Love With China"—and this special message has been shown in its own logo. The logo uses the characters for "wind" and "phoenix"(凤凰) in ancient oracle bone script(甲骨文) on a circular Chinese fan.

Madam Kang Jiaqi, the executive director of CHSDF, explains the many layers of meaning behind the logo: "The logo adopts the writing style of oracle bone script—dating back over 3,000 years—carved onto either turtle shell or ox bones.

"The Chinese character for 'wind' and the character for 'phoenix' are almost the same, with just one stroke difference. In China's ancient past, the character for 'phoenix' was widely considered to bring peace and happiness and represents good fortune. The character 'wind' has a long history and is also known as a name representing culture and spiritual power."

"Both the characters 'wind' and 'phoenix' share the same component in their characters, which is also used in the slogan 'In Love With China'. This extraordinary combination represents how experts lead fashion, which in turn leads culture—and that culture is the basis of creativity. Therefore, it represents the importance of traditional Chinese culture in global creativity.

"Taking the Chinese oracle bone character of 'wind' and 'phoenix' as our logo represents the beginning of Chinese civilization, which suggests that it can pass on Chinese culture through the cooperation between the CHSDF and the cooperative platform of global designers," explains Jiaqi.

Logo artist Sam Chung similarly explains her design process, "The decision of the oracle bone script of 'wind' comes from the root of the character itself. Originated from the character shape of 'phoenix,' 'wind's' oracle bone script still presents wonder, despite its more circular shape. The three tassels(流苏) at the end of the moon-shaped fan further give a feeling of lightness while hinting at both Eastern and Western flavors."

28. What do we know about the logo?

- A. It's carved on turtle shells.
- B. It's drawn on circular Chinese fans.
- C. It's designed in a new writing style.
- D. It's a combination of two similar characters.

29. Why are 'wind' and 'phoenix' chosen?
- A. They are easily written.
 - B. They symbolize good fortune.
 - C. They represent Chinese cultural and spiritual power.
 - D. They promote global creativity based on Chinese culture.
30. What can be inferred from the last paragraph?
- A. Sam Chung is the actual designer of the logo.
 - B. The idea for the logo comes from abroad.
 - C. The director has little say in the decision.
 - D. Tassels are symbol of western culture.
31. What's the passage mainly about?
- A. Chinese influence on the world.
 - B. The making of the logo for CHSDF.
 - C. Chinese culture and civilization.
 - D. Chinese characters 'wind' and 'phoenix'.

D

As data leak and identity theft become more and more common, the market is growing for fingerprint or iris scans(虹膜扫描) — to keep others out of private e-spaces. They're still expensive, though, and some people are unwilling to have personal identifiers taken and kept by a third party.

Researchers say they have come up with a low-cost device — a smart keyboard. It precisely measures the sound with which one types and the pressure fingers apply to each key. These patterns are unique to each individual, says Jun Chen, a doctoral engineering student. By measuring how somebody types a password(密码), he says, the keyboard can determine people's identities, and thus, by extension, whether they should be granted access to the computer it's connected to—regardless of whether someone gets the password right.

It doesn't require a new type of technology that people aren't already familiar with. "Everybody uses a keyboard...and everybody types differently," Chen says.

The device powers itself by generating electricity when a person's fingertips touch the keys - multi-layer plastic materials, press down, and lift again, which completes an electric circuit with the keyboard. The keyboard could offer a stronger layer of security by analyzing things like the force of a user's typing and the time between key presses.

This phenomenon, called "contact electrification," is the same process that creates static electricity, Chen says: "It's like when you run your hand across a wool blanket and see sparks(电火花) in the darkness."

In a study describing the technology published in the journal ACS Nano, the researchers had 100 volunteers type the word touch four times using the keyboard. Data gleaned from the device could be used to identify individual participants based on how they typed, with very low error rates, Chen says.

So far, there is just one such keyboard. But, Chen says, it should be pretty straightforward to commercialize and is mostly made of inexpensive, plastic-like parts. The team hopes it could make it to market in about five years.

32. What is the feature of the smart device?
- A. It's inexpensive.
 - B. It's a new type of technology.
 - C. It's inaccessible without a password.
 - D. It can recognize people's fingerprint.
33. How is the smart device powered?
- A. By fingers touching it.
 - B. By replaceable batteries.
 - C. By producing power of its own.
 - D. By being connected to electricity.
34. What does the underlined word "glean" probably mean in Paragraph 6?
- A. Collect.
 - B. Involve.
 - C. Contain.
 - D. Leak.
35. Which can be the best title for this passage?
- A. Smart Keyboard Can Produce Electricity Itself
 - B. Smart Keyboard Can Identify You by How You Type
 - C. Smart Keyboard Can Protect Personal Data Privacy
 - D. Smart Keyboard Can Measure Typing Forces and Time

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2 分, 满分 10 分)

根据短文内容, 从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

How to Exercise

Exercise is a key part of staying healthy, but figuring out how to get more active can be tough. 36. Always listen to your body's limits, and ask your doctor for advice in case of any medical issues. Importantly, create an exercise routine.

37. When you warm up, target the muscles you plan on exercising, but use less intense movements. For instance, walk for 5 to 10 minutes before jogging or doing a lower body workout.

Try to get 30 minutes of aerobic exercise per day. As a rule of thumb, you should get at least 30 minutes of moderately intense aerobic exercise daily. Examples include going for brisk walks and jogs, running, cycling, and swimming.

Include strength training at least 2 days per week. Also known as resistance training, strength training involves using free weights, resistance bands, or your own body weight to strengthen your muscles. For starters, try doing upper and lower body workouts 1 day a week each. 38.

Mix up your routine to keep things interesting. 39. That can motivate you to stay on track. Additionally, switching up your workouts will engage your entire body and help prevent injury.

Walk for 5 to 10 minutes and stretch to cool down. 40. Cool down by walking for 5 to 10 minutes and stretching the muscles your workout targeted.

- A. Adjust your routine to your experience level

B. Warm up for 5 to 10 minutes before working out

C. If you're not used to physical activity, start slow

D. Varying your activities can help keep you from getting bored

E. Gradually include 3 to 4 strength training days in the weekly routine

F. You can do strength training at home or use resistance machines at a local gym

G. You need gentler exercises to ease your body from working hard to being at rest

第二节 (共 10 小题; 每小题 1.5 分, 满分 15 分)

阅读下面材料, 在空白处填入适当的内容 (1 个单词) 或括号内单词的正确形式。

An elderly woman has broken down in tears inside a Coles supermarket after arriving in the canned food aisle to empty 61 (shelf), with all products taken by “selfish” panic buyers.

A heartbreaking image of the woman, 62 (take) inside the Port Melbourne supermarket at midday on Thursday and shared to Twitter by Nine News reporter Seb Costello, started an outpouring of feelings from the public, with many 63 (express) their willingness to help the lady and others currently suffering.

“64 (honest), that is the picture 65 catches this madness,” one person responded.

“This really breaks my heart, the elderly have already given to society, why aren’t we looking after them?” another said.

“This absolutely breaks my heart. If I 66 (know) where this lady lives, I’d help her out with food in a heartbeat. This has to stop now,” 67 third wrote.

One lady claimed she “sobbed 68 10 minutes” after seeing the image, and hoped “someone helped her fill her basket” and made sure she was OK at home. Others shared similarly shocking events they had seen during the COVID-19 (新冠病毒) chaos.

I 69 (tell) that the 92 year-old mum of a friend had a tin of tomato soup snatched from her hand at a supermarket in Ryde earlier this week. Disgraceful 70 (behave),” one wrote.

2. 只允许修改 10 处, 多者 (从第 11 处起) 不计分。

Everyone has a dream. So do me. When I grow up, it’s my dream to be a scientist. As the matter of fact, being a scientist had been one of my dreams since my childhood because scientists are the most knowledgeable and selfless in my mind. They devote themselves to help work out difficult problem in our life. They work hardly to help people in need, asking nothing in return. Science can push forward the development of the world, and I’m sure I will make the world good if I can become a scientist. I know it will be no easy job. Therefore, I believe my dream will be come true.

第二节 书面表达 (满分 25 分)
